Crystal World by Elizabeth John

Perfect as a precious pearl, it sits upon the table.
No eyes, or ears, and yet each day is witness to human fable.

Its dome of glass protects a fragile world of peaceful harmony,
Snow glitters like diamonds, and Frosty's nose is the colour of ebony.

The weather remains the same, always a snow storm,
But the air is mellow, calm, and sweetly warm.

Inside the silent world, no sounds are heard,
Not a verb, or a syllable, not one single word.

Young hands reach for the sparkling dome,
Curious eyes look to see if anyone is at home.

To the ground, to the floor, in a glittering mass,
Lays Frosty, and snow under shattered glass.

Gimpy by Marcie Roth

He is a mischievous little fellow
Who sprints about on tiny, elfkin feet,
Silver bells jingling from the ends of his toes
As he darts about, stirring trouble as he goes.
His wide, dancing grin covers his face
Clutching a piccolo in his chubby, calloused hands
Through which colorful melodies flow,
Painting flowerbeds jolly shades of pink, red and blue
Behind petunias, dancing in daffodils.
All that can be seen is his purple polka-dot bottom
As he dives beneath yet another daisy.
So next time you water your flowers
Be careful.
